Journal Impact Factor®

The Journal Impact Factor (JIF) is a journal-level metric calculated from data indexed in the Web of Science Core Collection. It should be used in conjunction with other metrics. The Journal Impact Factor can complement expert opinion and informed peer review. In the case of academic evaluation for tenure, it is inappropriate to use the JIF as the sole metric.

Springer Handbook of Science and Technology Indicators Wolfgang Glänzel, Henk F. Moed, Ulrich Schmoch, Mike Thelwall, 2019-10-30 This handbook presents the state of the art of quantitative methods and models to understand and assess the science and technology system Focusing on various aspects of the development and application of indicators derived from data on scholarly publications patents and electronic communications the individual chapters written by leading experts discuss theoretical and methodological issues illustrate applications highlight their policy context and relevance and point to future research directions A substantial portion of the book is dedicated to detailed descriptions and analyses of data sources presenting both traditional and advanced approaches It addresses the main bibliographic metrics and indexes such as the journal impact factor and the h index as well as altmetric and webometric indicators and science mapping techniques on different levels of aggregation and in the context of their value for the assessment of research performance as well as their impact on research policy and society It also presents and critically discusses various national research evaluation systems Complementing the sections reflecting on the science system the technology section includes multiple chapters that explain different aspects of patent statistics patent classification and database search methods to retrieve patent related information In addition it examines the relevance of trademarks and standards as additional technological indicators The Springer Handbook of Science and Technology Indicators is an invaluable resource for practitioners scientists and policy makers wanting a systematic and thorough analysis of the potential and limitations of the various approaches to assess research and research performance

Exploring Contemporary Classification Practices Jack Andersen, Joacim Hansson, 2025-07-15 The contributions in Exploring Contemporary Classification Practices analyse various aspects of classification and their importance to contemporary debates surrounding cultural heritage and information access Specific focus is on systems of classification media technologies and cultural institutions such as libraries archives and museums and how they respond to challenges including classificatory bias truth neutrality institutional tradition and technological innovation Raising awareness of classification practices in modern culture serves to emphasize how sorting things into categories is both an everyday accomplishment and a highly cultural and political activity with consequences for those who are classified and for those who classify Throughout this book classification is defined as the practice and activity of systematically ordering and categorizing entities to bring structure and understanding to diverse contexts This book addresses several timely issues both in terms of theoretical advancement and empirical diversity The scholarly discussion on the classification and organization of knowledge has developed with digital technologies from a bibliographic paradigm into something much wider as the need for metadata and classification has become critical for usability and legitimacy This development has also led research on classification and knowledge organization to confront a new post humanist reality with not only emerging varieties of information currents in society but also the development of new theoretical and methodological strands such as post colonial and intersectional perspectives and digital humanities methodologies In doing so this book seeks to address critical questions for the archives library and museum sectors concerning the organization of information Exploring Contemporary Classification Practices will therefore be of interest to academics researchers and practitioners with interests in library and information science archives cultural heritage and digital heritage
