Why Recycling Matters to the Earth and to Us

Does your town have a recycling center like the blue recycling bin? That's where we take old things like paper, plastic, metal, and glass so that recycling companies can turn them into new things. Recycling protects the Earth and keeps our communities clean.

Every day, people throw away tons of trash, if we don't recycle, all that trash ends up in landfills, it harmful to living things on the ground where garbage is buried. Too much garbage can hurt the land, water, air, and other recycling companies have to clean up trash.

Recycling also helps save natural resources. Natural resources are things we get from nature. This means, nothing can be thrown away because we didn't need to cut down so many trees. When we recycle plastic, we make new ones that don't need energy to make new things.

Another reason recycling is important is that it helps animals. Sometimes trash ends up in oceans or forests, animals can get hurt if they eat it or get stuck in it. By recycling, we help keep nature safe for animals and people too.

Making something new from recycled material takes less energy than making it from new material. For example, making cans from recycled aluminum takes less energy than using brand new aluminum. You can recycle at home or school or even at the park! Look for bins labeled for recycling.

It's important to use the blue or green bins because only proper citizens take bottles and cans out of containers. Before putting them in the bin so they stay clean. This makes a big difference. They can then reuse them like pens. Boxes, and bags making our lives and using less plastic also helps.

It's important to help the Earth. If we all do our part, we can make the world a better place.
