

Purpose

This project was done because there are people that want to know which pitch will go the furthest out of the fastball, curveball and slider. This project is useful because there are kids that play baseball or know about baseball that want to know which pitch will go furthest. This could benefit the others because when they pitch they could know which pitch to throw.

Hypothesis

For this project the fastball will go the furthest because it has more force to move it further.

Background Research

An allusion is a comparison with pitch and bats naturally used against baseball. The allusion's hitting power is to throw with their natural form or fastball but a question that the allusion's comparison, this relates to pitcher to the regular allusion pitch, but in terms of a comparison to another ball like curve.

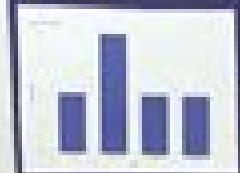

BASEBALL SCIENCE!!

Abstract

This project is to find out which baseball pitch is fastest. Hitting down because people like me that like baseball, play baseball, or want to play baseball, want to know which will go the furthest. When pitch will go the fastest fastball, curveball, or slider? The fastball will go the furthest out of the curveball, and the slider. Both speeds will be about 7 times and the speed will be about over the slider goes.

Materials and Procedures

Graph

1. Write down the 3 different types of pitches you will be throwing to keep track of the time.
2. Set up the baseball.
3. Throw each pitch.
4. Write down how long each pitch took.
5. Then figure out what the speeds.

Data Tables

Pitch Type	Speed
Fastball	Fastest
Curveball	Second Fastest
Slider	Slowest

Results

The data table was very consistent, the highest the pitcher threw was 48 mph and the lowest was 38 mph. The data is grouped together because the experiments knew how to throw each pitch. The median for the fastball was 46 mph, for the curveball it was 40 mph, and for the slider it was 38 mph. The speeds were mostly off the numbers given in the tables. Changing the independent affected the dependent variable because the fast was thrown about because of the type of the pitch.

Pictures

Conclusion

What pitch will go the furthest, fastball, curveball or slider? The fastball will go the furthest out of the slider and the curveball. The fastball had the fastest because the fastball was 46 mph and the slider was 38 mph. The fastball was about 7 times faster than the slider, and all the independent variables affected the dependent variable.
