

THE PRINCIPLE FOR RELATIONSHIP-FOCUSED CARE

For many years, you will have been told that you must respond to patients' needs and wishes.

Observation 1: while

• All the things that all their patients (or, at least, the ones they treat) have in common, patients' needs and wishes are different. People brought into a different situation, even if they are the same, can have different needs and wishes. Many people have different needs and wishes.

• Individual patients are different.

• Some patients are sick.

• Some are interested in health and others

• Others are not.

• Some patients are friendly, outgoing, talkative and responsive, others are more quiet, less talkative and less responsive. All these patients need to be treated the same way.

Observation 2: while

• Other things that all their patients (or, at least, the ones they treat) have in common, patients' needs and wishes are different. People brought into a different situation, even if they are the same, can have different needs and wishes.

• Individual patients are different.

• Some patients are sick.
