Scientific Expedition to the North-western Provinces of China ,1966 Register of Ships ,1993 Smoothings of Piecewise Linear Manifolds Morris W. Hirsch, Barry Mazur, 2016-03-02 The intention of the authors is to examine the relationship between piecewise linear structure and differential structure a relationship they assert that can be understood as a homotopy obstruction theory and hence can be studied by using the traditional techniques of algebraic topology Thus the book attacks the problem of existence and classification up to isotopy of differential structures compatible with a given combinatorial structure on a manifold The problem is completely solved in the sense that it is reduced to standard problems of algebraic topology The first part of the book is purely geometrical it proves that every smoothing of the product of a manifold M and an interval is derived from an essentially unique smoothing of M In the second part this result is used to translate the classification of smoothings into the problem of putting a linear structure on the tangent microbundle of M This in turn is converted to the homotopy problem of classifying maps from M into a certain space PL O The set of equivalence classes of smoothings on M is given a natural abelian group structure A Standard Dictionary of the English
