

Objectivity: An Introduction

Students demonstrate an ability to describe an experience after reading historic documents simply from the documents without specifying or putting the experience in a particular (the best or worst) circumstance that is usually depicted as a good or bad experience. Students will compare the typical circumstances with the actual circumstances from local sources. The typical circumstances will be taken from the local sources and given to the students that provide context and, without affecting the actual circumstances, change the circumstances that students described in their given design. This is because students have a strong tendency to describe the experience in their own words, and it is important to have a strong tendency to describe the experience in their own words. Students will describe the experience in their own words, and it is important to have a strong tendency to describe the experience in their own words.
