Architecture's Model Environments Lisa Moffitt,2023-02-20 Seen through the distilling lens of the architectural model Architecture's Model Environments is a novel and far reaching exploration of the many dialogues buildings have with their environmental surroundings Expanding on histories of building technology the book sheds new light on how physical models conventionally understood as engineering experimentation devices enable architectural design speculation The book begins with a catalogue of ten original model prototypes of wind tunnels water tables and filling boxes and is the first of its kind to establish an architectural approach to fabricating such environmental models Subsequent chapters feature three precedent models that have been largely overlooked within the wider oeuvres of their authors French polymath tienne Jules Marey's 1900 2 wind tunnels Hungarian American architects Victor and Alad r Olgay's 1955 63 thermoheliodon and Scottish chemist and building ventilation expert David Boswell The Ventilator Reid's 1844 test tube convection experiments Moving between historic moments and the present day between case studies and original prototypes the book reveals the potent ability for models as both physical artefacts and mental ideals to reflect prevailing cultural views about the world and to even reshape those views Fundamentally Architecture's Model Environments illustrates how environmental models reveal design insights across scales from the seam that leaks to the body that feels to the building that mediates to the world that immerses

Modeling and Rendering Architecture from Photographs Paul Ernest Debevec, 1996 Abstract We present an approach for creating realistic synthetic views of existing architectural scenes from a sparse set of still photographs. Our approach which combines both geometry based and image based modeling and rendering techniques has two components. The first component is an easy to use photogrammetric modeling system which facilitates the recovery of a basic geometric model of the photographed scene. The modeling system is effective and robust because it exploits the constraints that are characteristic of architectural scenes. The second component is a model based stereo algorithm which recovers how the real scene deviates from the basic model. By making use of the model our stereo approach can robustly recover accurate depth from image pairs with large baselines. Consequently our approach can model large architectural environments with far fewer photographs than current image based modeling approaches. As an intermediate result we present view dependent texture mapping a method of better simulating geometric detail on basic models. Our approach can recover models for use in either geometry based or image based rendering systems. We present results that demonstrate our approach's ability to create realistic renderings of architectural scenes from viewpoints far from the original photographs
