

Social influence

→ Asch's research:

- Procedure = 123 American men in groups with 5-7 confederates who gave the wrong answer on some trials - naive pts conformed about 37% of times.
- Group Size = 145 confederates with 3 confederates, conformity was 32% but little significant increase after.
- unanimity = conformity rate dropped with dissenter (whether they were right or wrong)
- Task difficulty = stimulus & comparison lines more similar in length: conformity increased (mainly ISO)

→ Types of conformity:

- Internalisation = conforming to the group because you accept its norms - agree privately & publicly (permanent change)
- Identification = conforming to the group because we value it - prepared to change views to be accepted by it
- Compliance = Superficial agreement with the group - going along with it publicly but not privately (temporary change)

→ Explanations for conformity:

- Informational social influence (ISO) = agreeing with majority view because we believe they know better or are more likely to be right.
- Normative social influence (NSI) = agreeing with the majority because we want to be liked and/or do not want to be rejected.

→ Zimbardo's research:

- Procedure = 21 emotionally stable students randomly allocated to roles of prisoners & guards in mock prison - social roles reinforced through uniforms (e.g. loose smock cap for prisoners) & instructions about behaviour (e.g. prisoners applied for 'parole to leave study').
- Findings = guards treated prisoners harshly - harassed them constantly (e.g. night time head counts), prisoners rebellion failed, & they became more depressed. Study stopped after 6 days!
- conclusions = social roles have a strong importance on behaviour - brutal guards, submissive prisoners, social roles can be very easily adopted (including by volunteers such as 'prison chaplain').
