

Activity 1:

The investigation into the temperature of the car's engine gave that it had been driven more recently than the suspect had said. Also, police records could be checked to confirm that the suspect was on the phone with a friend until 10:23 pm.

Activity 2:

Newton's Law of Cooling states that the change in temperature,  $T$ , is related directly with the difference between the initial temperature,  $T$ , and the ambient temperature  $A$ . Equation 4.1 represents the constant of variation for a positive value of  $k$ . This is the same as: change in temperature =  $k$  (constant) (initial temperature - ambient temperature). The constant is negative because over time, the temperature decreases.

Substituting variables, you get:

$$T = A + C e^{kt}$$
