

Lesson/Activity:

Drama:

- Instruct students on how to use their bodies to create tableaus (frozen pictures) of the shapes from the story. Students should use facial expressions, imagination, and varying levels to represent the text.
- Students will be divided into small groups. Each group will be assigned to represent the shapes during the reading (e.g., triangle, square, pentagon).
- The teacher will guide them in problem-solving how to connect their bodies to form the correct number of sides and vertices for their assigned shape.
- For example, three students could form a triangle by holding hands and extending their bodies to create the three sides and three vertices. Students will practice holding their poses silently, embodying the static nature of a tableau.

Students may also be given the option to choose their own shape or part of the story.

Wrap Up:

- Take a "snapshot" of the tableaus by pretending to click a camera and take a pretend picture.
- Have students discuss what they see in the tableau and how it represents the text.

Communication Across the Curriculum Beatrice A. Furner, 1989    Teaching the Language Arts Cathy Collins Block, 2001 This book explains and demonstrates with a clear step by step approach how communication and thinking competencies can be enhanced through instruction. This revision elaborates further on a language arts program built to focus on the needs of individual students. Each of the fourteen chapters is divided into three sections covering theoretical foundations, practice, and professional development, giving the text a practical, usable organization. The second and third sections apply the principles from the first section to the classroom. Features in these sections show specific teaching strategies that offer practical ideas for teachers to develop an ongoing and successful teaching repertoire. For Language Arts teachers.
