Fragmenting the Chieftain Sasja Vaart,2017 There is a cluster of Early Iron Age 800 500 BC elite burials in the Low Countries in which bronze vessels weaponry horse gear and wagons were interred as grave goods Mostly imports from Central Europe these objects are found brought together in varying configurations in cremation burials generally known as Chieftain s graves or Princely burials In terms of grave goods they resemble the F rstengr ber of the Hallstatt Culture of Central Europe with famous Dutch and Belgian examples being the Chieftain s grave of Oss the wagon grave of Wijchen and the elite cemetery of Court St Etienne Fragmenting the Chieftain presents the results of an in depth and practice based archaeological analysis of the Dutch and Belgian elite graves and the burial practice through which they were created It was established that the elite burials are embedded in the local burial practices as reflected by the use of the cremation rite the bending and breaking of grave goods and the pars pro toto deposition of human remains and objects all in accordance with the dominant local urnfield burial practice It appears that those individuals interred with wagons and related items warranted a more elaborate funerary rite most likely because these ceremonial and cosmologically charged vehicles marked their owners out at exceptional individuals Furthermore in a few graves the configuration of the grave good set the use of textiles to wrap grave goods and the dead and the reuse of burial mounds show the influence of individuals familiar with Hallstatt Culture burial customs Back cover Münchener volkswirtschaftliche Studien Lujo Brentano,Walther Lotz,1896
