Sustainable Intensification of Agriculture Jules Pretty, Zareen Pervez Bharucha, 2018-06-14 Sustainable intensification SI has emerged in recent years as a powerful new conceptualisation of agricultural sustainability and has been widely adopted in policy circles and debates It is defined as a process or system where yields are increased without adverse environmental impact and without the cultivation of more land Co written by Jules Pretty one of the pioneers of the concept and internationally known and respected authority on sustainable agriculture this book sets out current thinking and debates around sustainable agriculture and intensification It recognises that world population is increasing rapidly so that yields must increase on finite land and other resources to maintain food security It provides the first widely accessible overview of the concept of SI as an innovative approach to agriculture and as a key element in the transition to a green economy. It presents evidence from around the world to show how various innovations are improving yields, resilience and farm incomes particularly for resource constrained smallholders in developing countries but also in the developed world. It shows how SI is a fundamental departure from previous models of agricultural intensification. It also highlights the particular role and potential of small scale farmers and the fundamental importance of social and human capital in designing and spreading effective innovations.

abstract Most previous studies on vulnerability of smallholder farmer's livelihood to climatic hazards had focused on large scale global regional or national levels. In addition they gave more focus to assessment of impacts of climatic hazards to farmers than assessment of farmer's vulnerability to climatic hazards. Thus this study was designed to bridge this gap by assessing vulnerability of farmer's livelihood at household level measured as perceived sensitivity and lack of adaptive capacity to climatic hazards and by exploring sets of socioeconomic indicators that significantly determine vulnerability of farmers' livelihoods. Cross sectional data was collected through household survey from 379 randomly selected respondents which were also complemented with qualitative assessments. Principal component analysis was used to identify major socioeconomic indicators that contribute to vulnerability of farmer's livelihood using orthogonal axis rotation in SPSS version 20. Binary logit model was used to identify principal socioeconomic indicators that significantly influence sensitivity and adaptive capacity of livelihoods of sampled farmers. The findings revealed that households that are heterogeneous in location of residence, sources of income, ownership to animals have significant influence on perceived sensitivity of farmers to climatic hazards. However socioeconomic indicators such as age, gender, family size have insignificant influence on sensitivity of farmer's livelihood to climatic hazards. Gender, marital status, educational status of household head, coping mechanisms like grain cash saving, NRM practices have significant influence on perceived adaptive capacity of farmers. Yet access to social interconnectedness such as idir or iqub, family relatives and cost of drinking water has insignificant influence on perceived adaptive capacity of farmers. Currently 59%, 38% and 3% of sampled farmers have overall vulnerability status of low, moderate and high respectively. The overall conclusion is that differences in status of vulnerability of their livelihoods are attributed to differences in their present socioeconomic attributes. Community should strengthen existing hazard coping mechanisms whilst GOs and NGOs should support farmers in diversification of income sources and restocking of animals
