- Wild-type protein (this sequence has been conserved in evolution or found identical) is known to be a disordered (not  $\alpha$ -helical) protein.
- Disordered protein is not a random coil (combining random coil with sequence analysis and results in a list of conserved residues).
- Disordered regions have specificity to bind to proteins.
- Disordered is not a property of amino acids (by knowing you are looking at the protein of interest, you can find out what amino acids it has, but it is not a property of the amino acids themselves, or what it might mean to get a certain amino acid in a protein, it is an evolution, not a biochemistry as normally we think of various things like the pKa).
- Disordered means that sequence is not conserved (conservation is a property of amino acids).

Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to a 12-week training program or a control group. The training group performed a 12-week program of aerobic exercise, while the control group remained sedentary. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week program. The results showed that the training group had a significant increase in HR and EE compared to the control group. The increase in HR was 10.5 beats per minute, and the increase in EE was 1,050 kcal per day. These results suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively increase HR and EE in sedentary, middle-aged women.

- At low water velocities, the drag is longer than the standard drag coefficient, while at high velocities the velocity dependence of the drag coefficient disappears. In sum, that is the drag is independent of the velocity of the flow.
- At low velocities the drag is not completely without the velocity, the standard drag coefficient, the length of the column may differ depending on the wall-mounted apparatus.
- Do not forget the many flow lines. The drag force is the product of the pressure difference, the surface area of the object. To achieve the same drag force, the pressure difference is the same, but the surface area is different.
- For the drag coefficient, the drag force is the product of the pressure difference and the surface area.
