Today people use a large number of systems ranging in complexity from washing machines to international airline reservation systems. Computers are used in nearly all such systems; accuracy and security are becoming increasingly essential. The design of such computer systems should make use of development methods as systematic as those used in other engineering disciplines. A systematic development method must provide a way of writing specifications which are both precise and concise; it must also supply a way of relating design to specification. A concise specification can be achieved by restricting attention to what a system has to do; all considerations of implementation details are postponed. With computer systems this is done by 1 building an abstract model of the system operations being specified by pre and post conditions, 2 defining languages by mapping program texts onto some collection of objects modeling the concepts of the system to be dealt with whose meaning is understood, 3 defining complex data objects in terms of abstractions known from mathematics. This last topic, the use of abstract data types, pervades all work on specifications and is necessary in order to apply ideas to systems of significant complexity. The use of mathematics-based notations is the best way to achieve precision.

1.1 ABSTRACT DATA TYPES PROOF TECHNIQUES

From a practical point of view, a solution to these three problems consists to introduce abstract data types in the programming languages and to consider formal proof methods.

Two central ideas in the movement toward advanced automation systems are the office of the future or office automation system and the factory of the future or factory automation system. An office automation system is an integrated system with diversified office equipment communication devices intelligent terminals intelligent copiers etc for providing information management and control in a distributed office environment A factory automation system is also an integrated system with programmable machine tools robots and other process equipment such as new peripherals for providing manufacturing information management and control Such advanced automation systems can be regarded as the response to the demand for greater variety greater flexibility customized designs rapid response and Just in time delivery of office services or manufactured goods The economy of scope which allows the production of a variety of similar products in random order gradually replaces the economy of scale derived from overall volume of operations In other words we are gradually switching from the production of large volumes of standard products to systems for the production of a wide variety of similar products in small batches This is the phenomenon of demassification of the marketplace as described by Alvin Toffler in The Third Wave      HYDRA/C.mmp, an Experimental Computer System William Allan Wulf, Roy Levin, Samuel P.
