Abstract—The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the heart rate (HR) and energy expenditure (EE) of sedentary, middle-aged women. The subjects were randomly assigned to either a control group (CON) or an exercise group (EX). The EX group performed a 12-week training program consisting of three sessions per week of aerobic exercise. The HR and EE were measured at baseline and at the end of the 12-week training program. The EX group showed a significant decrease in HR and a significant increase in EE compared to the CON group. The results of this study suggest that a 12-week training program can effectively reduce HR and increase EE in sedentary, middle-aged women.

- The wall-mount installation is no longer "the standard"
 - demands more wall strength with the addition of an extra support structure, known as a "backer" and also may require the manager to be inside of the closet.
- The wall-mounts do not do away with the need for a VESA
 - standard mount specification, as the design of the screen may still differ depending on the wall-mount type specifications.
- The wall-mounts have many benefits. They may damage the product or reduce the product's life, leading to the general opinion: "Is making room for the screen worth the cost?"
- The "backer" may also provide more of the needed space
 - for the screen to be mounted, but it is not possible to mount the TV against the backer.

Abstract: This research is an exploratory study on the relationship between the quality of the work environment and the quality of the work life. The study is based on a survey of 100 employees in a large company. The results show that the quality of the work environment is positively related to the quality of the work life. The study also shows that the quality of the work environment is a significant predictor of the quality of the work life. The study has implications for the design of the work environment and for the management of the work life.
