

The Synthesis Essay

WHAT IS A SYNTHESIS?

A synthesis is a written discussion that draws on one or more sources. It follows that your ability to write syntheses depends on your ability to infer relationships among sources - essays, articles, fiction, and also non-written sources, such as lectures, interviews, and observations. This process is nothing new for you, since you infer relationships all the time - say, between something you've read in the newspaper and something you've seen for yourself, or between the teaching styles of your favorite and least favorite instructors. In fact, if you've written research papers, you've already written syntheses. In an academic synthesis, you make explicit the relationships that you have inferred among separate sources.

Clearly, before you're in a position to draw relationships between two or more sources, you must understand what those sources say; in other words, you must be able to summarize these sources. It will frequently be helpful for your readers if you provide at least partial summaries of sources in your synthesis essays. At the same time, you must go beyond summary to make judgments - judgments based, of course, on your critical reading of your sources - as you have practiced in your reading responses and in class discussions. You should already have drawn some conclusions about the quality and validity of these sources; and you should know how much you agree or disagree with the points made in your sources and the reasons for your agreement or disagreement.

Further, you must go beyond the critique of individual sources to determine the relationship among them. Is the information in source B, for example, an extended illustration of the generalizations in source A? Would it be useful to compare and contrast source C with source B? Having read and considered sources A, B, and C, can you infer something else - D (not a source, but your own idea)?

Because a synthesis is based on two or more sources, you will need to be selective when choosing information from each. It would be neither possible nor desirable, for instance, to discuss in a ten-page paper on the battle of Wounded Knee every point that the authors of two books make about their subject. What you as a writer must do is select the ideas and information from each source that best allow you to achieve your purpose.

PURPOSE

Your purpose in reading source materials and then in drawing upon them to write your own material is often reflected in the wording of an assignment. For example, your assignment may ask that you evaluate a text, argue a position on a topic, explain cause and effect relationships, or compare and contrast items. While you might use the same sources in writing an argumentative essay as your classmate uses in writing a comparison/contrast essay, you will make different uses of those sources based on the different purposes of the assignments. What you find worthy of detailed analysis in Source A may be mentioned only in passing by your classmate. Many times, your purpose will be dictated by the assignment.

USING YOUR SOURCES

Your purpose determines not only what parts of your sources you will use but also how you will relate them to one another. Since the very essence of synthesis is the combining of information and ideas, you must have some basis on which to combine them. It follows that the better able you are to discover such relationships, the better able you will be to use your sources in writing syntheses. Your purpose in writing (based on your assignment) will determine how you relate your source materials to one another. Your purpose in writing determines which sources you use, which parts of them you use, at which points in your essay you use them, and in what manner you relate them to one another.

 This volume culls scholarship on both what high literacy is and how it is developed. It embraces the call put forth by Langer and Applebee 2016 that high literacy must continue to be our aim and to see more research analyzing and identifying how teachers might promote literacy practices that promote deep thinking around important content. The editors offer a conceptual framework for high literacy that explicates how each component i.e. reading writing dialogic engagement and epistemic cognition in literary reasoning relates to the others and from what scholarly literature these concepts have been derived. Individual chapter authors provide in depth examinations of the existing research base on particular related topics focusing on the two important cross cutting aims of the volume 1 explicating the roles reading writing dialogic engagement and epistemic cognition hold in high literacy development and 2 providing examples of practices recommended to develop high literacy.

Flood and Coastal Erosion Risk Management Edmund Penning-Rowsell, Sally Priest, Dennis Parker, Joe Morris, Sylvia Tunstall, Christophe Viavattene, John Chatterton, Damon Owen, 2014-01-03
 A new Multi Coloured Manual. This book is a successor to and replacement for the highly respected manual and handbook on the benefits of flood and coastal risk management produced by the Flood Hazard Research Centre at Middlesex University UK with support from Defra and the Environment Agency. It builds upon a previous book known as the multi coloured manual 2005 which itself was a synthesis of the blue 1977 red 1987 and yellow manuals 1992. As such it expands and updates this work to provide a manual of assessment techniques of flood risk management benefits indirect benefits and coastal erosion risk management benefits. It has three key aims. First it provides methods and data which can be used for the practical assessment of schemes and policies. Secondly it describes new research to update the data and improve techniques Thirdly it explains the limitations and complications of Benefit Cost Analysis to guide decision making on investment in river and coastal risk management schemes

Risk Factors for Pancreatic Cancer: Underlying Mechanisms and Potential Targets Guido Eibl,Mouad Edderkaoui,2015-04-22 Pancreatic Cancer has been and still is one of the deadliest types of human malignancies The annual mortality rates almost equal incidence rates making this disease virtually universally fatal The 5 year survival of patients with pancreatic cancer is a dismal 5% or less Therapeutic strategies are extremely limited with gemcitabine extending the survival by a disappointing few weeks The failure of several randomized clinical trials in the past decade investigating the therapeutic efficacy of different mono and combination therapies reflects our limited knowledge of pancreatic cancer biology In addition biomarkers for early detection are sorely missing Several pancreatic cancer risk factors have been identified Unfortunately the underlying mechanisms linking these risk factors to cancer development are poorly understood Well known possible and probable risk factors for the development of pancreatic cancer are age smoking chronic pancreatitis obesity and type 2 diabetes mellitus Age is certainly of the most important risk factors as most cases of pancreatic cancer occur in the elderly population Smoking ten cigarettes a day increases the risk by 2.6 times and smoking a pack per day increases it by 5 folds Chronic pancreatitis increases the risk of pancreatic cancer by up to 13 times Patients with hereditary forms of chronic pancreatitis have an even higher risk Obesity a growing global health problem increases the risk of pancreatic cancer by about 1.5 fold Type 2 diabetes mellitus is also associated with an increased risk of pancreatic cancer by at least two fold The more recent the onset of diabetes the stronger the correlation with pancreatic cancer is In addition heavy alcohol drinking a family history of the disease male gender and African American ethnicity are other risk factors for pancreatic cancer Pancreatic cancer is characterized by several genetic alterations including mutations in the Kras proto oncogene and mutations in the tumor suppressor genes p53 and p16 While Kras mutations are currently thought as early events present in a certain percentage of pancreatic intraepithelial neoplasias PanINs known precursor lesions of pancreatic ductal adenocarcinomas mutations in tumor suppressor genes e.g p53 seem to accumulate later during progression In addition several intracellular signaling pathways are amplified or enhanced including the MAPK ERK and PI3K AKT signaling modules Overall these genetic alterations lead to enhanced and sustained proliferation resistance to cell death invasive and metastatic potential and angiogenesis all hallmarks of cancers The scope of this Research Topic is to collect data and knowledge of how risk factors increase the risk of initiation progression of pancreatic cancer Of particular interest are potential underlying molecular mechanisms Understanding the molecular mechanisms and driving signaling pathways will ultimately allow the development of targeted interventions to disrupt the risk factor induced cancer development This Research Topic is interested in a broad range of risk factors including genetic and environmental and welcomes original papers mini and full reviews and hypothesis papers Manuscripts that address the effect of combination of risk factors on pancreatic cancer development and progression are of great interest as well
