Tropical Forest Community Ecology Walter Carson, Stefan Schnitzer, 2011-08-31

Historically, tropical ecology has been a science often content with descriptive and demographic approaches, which is understandable given the difficulty of studying these ecosystems and the need for basic demographic information. Nonetheless, over the last several years, tropical ecologists have begun to test more sophisticated ecological theory and are now beginning to address a broad array of questions that are of particular importance to tropical systems and ecology in general. Why are there so many species in tropical forests and what mechanisms are responsible for the maintenance of that vast species diversity? What factors control species coexistence? Are there common patterns of species abundance and distribution across broad geographic scales? What is the role of trophic interactions in these complex ecosystems? How can these fragile ecosystems be conserved? Containing contributions from some of the world's leading tropical ecologists, Tropical Forest Community Ecology provides a summary of the key issues in the discipline of tropical ecology. Includes contributions from some of the world's leading tropical ecologists. Covers patterns of species distribution, the maintenance of species diversity, the community ecology of tropical animals, forest regeneration, and conservation of tropical ecosystems.

Community Ecology in a Changing World John H. Lawton, Otto Kinne, 2000 Special Issue: Violent Youth Radicalisation: Perspectives and Solutions, 2020-12-21 This timely special issue looks at a current pressing societal challenge that is truly global in its existence but very local in the way it plays out in various geographical, social, and political contexts. Terrorism and extremism are undoubtedly among the biggest problems the world is facing today, and is leaving in its wake a trail of death and destruction where the human and social costs are perhaps more significant than wars fought between countries on the world stage. These realities breed suspicion, hatred, and feelings of revenge, and invariably result in a spiral of violence that seemingly has no end. Not only is there a need to explore the various factors leading to violent youth radicalisation, it is clear that young people need to be considered not as victims at risk but rather as responsible agents of positive change. This issue focuses on violent youth radicalisation in the context of Professor Gavrielides The Youth Empowerment and Innovation Project YEIP which looked at the problem of violent youth radicalisation across seven European Countries The project sought to propose a uniquely different way of combatting violent youth radicalisation by proposing an alternative to punitive means so often favoured by governments That alternative proposed was to use Positive psychology and the Good Lives model to intervene with young people at risk of violent radicalisation focusing on positive identity and well being on the premise that young people who had a positive view of themselves would be less likely to be drawn into violent radicalisation DOI 10.13140/RG.2.2.22734.33606 ISBN 978 1 911634 22 5 Journal ISSN online 2056 2985

Plant Competition in a Changing World Judy Simon, Susanne Schmidt, 2017-06-22 Competitiveness describes a key ability important for plants to grow and survive abiotic and biotic stresses Under optimal but particularly under non optimal conditions plants compete for resources including nutrients light water space pollinators and other Competition occurs above and belowground In resource poor habitats competition is generally considered to be more pronounced than in resource rich habitats Although competition occurs between different players within an ecosystem such as between plants and soil microorganisms our topic focusses on plant plant interactions and includes inter specific competition between different species of similar and different life forms and intra specific competition Strategies for securing resources via spatial or temporal separation and different resource needs generally reduce competition Increasingly important is the effect of invasive plants and subsequent decline in biodiversity and ecosystem function Current knowledge and future climate predictions suggest that in some situations competition will be intensified with occurrence of increased abiotic e g water and nutrient limitations and biotic stresses e g mass outbreak of insects but competition might also decrease in situations where plant productivity and survival declines e g habitats with degraded soils Changing interactions climate change and biological invasions place new challenges on ecosystems Understanding processes and mechanisms that underlie the interactions between plants and environmental factors will aid predictions and intervention There is much need to develop strategies to secure ecosystem services via primary productivity and to prevent the continued loss of biodiversity This Research Topic provides an up to date account of knowledge on plant plant interactions with a focus on identifying the mechanisms underpinning competitive ability The Research Topic aims to showcase knowledge that links ecological relevance with physiological processes to better understanding plant and ecosystem function
