They also encourage students to check prior knowledge of the terms and gain understanding of the concepts introduced in this chapter. Each blank can be completed with a unit, three places, or nothing.

Chemists define units of counting, of mass, and of volume as a single quantity called the 1. Chemists measure the "amount of substance." One way to measure the amount of a substance is to count the number of 2 of that substance. The amount of representative particles for a sample of a substance is called 3. This number is 4. For example, a mole of nitrogen contains $6.02 \times 10^{23} 5 of nitrogen.$

Chemists define gram atomic mass as the weight of grams of an element whose mass is equal to the 6 atomic mass. This is that 12.01 g of carbon contains the same number of atoms as 7 g of oxygen atoms.

To find the amount in moles of a substance represented, we will require the 8 of the above-stating equal analogy. When we substitute the value given for mass, we obtain the 9 of the compound. If we make comparisons that is not an appropriate quantity, because the representative particles found in each compound is the same, the comparison made is called as 10. The term gram formula mass and 11 can be used to refer to the mass of a mole of any substance or compound.

The gram formula mass is a useful factor in computing a relationship between the number of molecules/atoms. The relationship that number of molecules is completely the opposite, for example, we can find mass relationship as 12. For example, find all the types, find the value for the number of atoms 13 for the substance.
