Barton,Amy Genders,2026-01-22 Profound transformations in the ways media products are produced distributed and consumed caused by digital technologies that have disrupted established business models markets and relationships has led to a renewed interest in the industry's spatial patterning and hence the importance of place in which locality paradoxically in an era of globalisation has been seen as having heightened significance This renewed interest in space and location sometimes characterised as the spatial turn in media studies has become a particularly pressing and urgent issue across Europe over the last decade as the effects of digital disruption become more pervasive In an era of the increasing internationalisation of media production and an orientation to global markets policy makers have recognised the importance of preserving even enhancing this spatial plurality As many studies have shown the strength and influence of Public Service Media which have traditionally embraced this role of cultural identity building albeit with mixed results has weakened in the face of increasingly powerful alternative providers satellite channels or streaming platforms These competitors such as Sky or Netflix operate to a global commercial logic in which territories not defined by either established national or regional boundaries are conceived as markets not cultures This new logic does not entirely displace or supersede the older logics of analogue broadcasting but introduces new layers of spatial complexity that need to be investigated and analysed This wide ranging collection seeks to address these layers of spatial complexity through a series of interconnected chapters investigating and analysing the importance of place space and locality across the breadth of Europe from Greenland to Romania Although the collection attends to the paradoxes and contradictions of space place and locality revealed by detailed investigation it is inspired by the desire to identify and find ways of valuing the various strategies practices and specific productions that resist homogenisation ones that encourage plurality and sustainable growth and which contribute to the European cultural ideal of unity in diversity This is an open access book

Delivering Authentic Arts Education with Student Resource Access 12 Months Judith Dinham,2016-08-23 This practical text helps student teachers develop their confidence understandings and skills so that they can effectively and authentically teach arts in primary and middle school classrooms Delivering Authentic Arts Education outlines the true nature of arts education and its importance in the curriculum emphasising the arts as forms of creative activity meaning making and expression in a cultural context Chapters discuss how to recognise and build on your existing artistic abilities and pedagogical skills how to encourage children's creativity how to lead arts appreciation experiences and the general principles of planning and assessment. They then examine the five arts areas: dance, drama, media arts, music and visual arts. The final part of the text contains sample learning activities and resources that demonstrate how to plan an effective lesson within a unit of inquiry. Practical tips, classroom snapshots, starter ideas and suggestions for online resources show you the links between theory and practice so you can develop arts education experiences that are purposeful, stimulating and engaging for everyone.
