- ☐ The most common statistical test for comparing two means is the t-test.
- ☐ The null hypothesis states that there is no significant difference between the two groups.
- ☐ The p-value indicates the probability of observing the results if the null hypothesis is true.
- ☐ The significance level is typically set at 0.05, meaning there is a 5% chance of rejecting the null hypothesis when it is actually true.
- ☐ A p-value less than the significance level indicates that the results are statistically significant.
- ☐ The t-test assumes that the data is normally distributed and that the variances are equal.
- ☐ The test statistic is calculated based on the sample means, standard deviations, and sample sizes.
- ☐ The results of the t-test can be used to determine if there is a significant difference between the two groups.
- ☐ The t-test is a parametric test, meaning it requires certain assumptions to be met.
- ☐ The t-test is used to compare the means of two groups, not the variances or standard deviations.
