SCORING METHODS OF POLYSOMNOGRAPHY FOR DIAGNOSIS OF SLEEP APNEA IN ADOLESCENTS. , 2017 Purpose Both respiratory scoring rule for children and adults can be used for adolescents in 2007 and 2012 American Academy of Sleep Medicine AASM scoring manuals. We evaluated the differences in scoring method of polysomnography using both 2007 and 2012 AASM scoring manuals when pediatric and adult scoring rules are adopted for adolescents for the diagnosis of sleep apnea. Methods 106 Korean subjects with ages between 13 and 18 years old were enrolled. All subjects underwent overnight polysomnography in a sleep laboratory. Data were scored by both pediatric and adult rules in 2007 and 2012 AASM scoring manuals. Results Both pediatric and adult apnea hypopnea indices AHI using 2012 method were significantly higher than those using 2007 method. Difference of AHI among pediatric versus adult score in 2012 method was markedly decreased than that in 2007 method. There was a significant discordance of diagnosis for sleep apnea between pediatric and adult scoring rules in 2012 method Conclusions Both pediatric and adult rules could be used for the diagnosis of adolescent sleep apnea in 2012 method However there was significant discordance of diagnosis for sleep apnea between pediatric and adult rules in 2012 method This might be due to different cut off values of AHI for diagnosing sleep apnea among pediatric u22651 and adult u22655 rules Further studies are needed to determine which cut off value is more reasonable for diagnosing sleep apnea in adolescents     American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine ,2008
