

aerodynamics, they made the A320 and the A321 the most fuel efficient commercial jets on the market.

EXERCISE

The Airbus A321 cost per passenger mile is by far the lowest in its category.

The A319 has the lowest fuel consumption.

The engines too interface with the flight by wire controls and the autopilot system.

The whole family has the same man machine interface. The Primary Flight Display alone replaces six conventional electromagnetic instruments.

Information is displayed on a six cathode ray tubes when it is needed, thus reducing the crew's workload.

A major asset of computer-aided design is ease of access to system operation parameters. This is an advantage for the Centralized Fault Display System (CFDS), the key to maintenance guidance.

Any failure is analyzed, the faulty component identified, the diagnosis made, and if necessary the information is transmitted to the ground in real time for time saving repair.

The A320 family ties really come into their own when it comes to maintenance. Virtually all desparts, test devices and procedures are identical. No need for extra stocks or special training or facilities in service staff are available for the whole family.

PLIANT ADVANTAGE

In terms of maintenance operating A320s, A311s and A319s is the same as operating a single type. The savings are enormous, common equipment, common staff.

For cabin sizes, the cabin is a just a little longer or shorter.

For pilots the aircraft are virtually the same. They react in the same way to the same commands. This is true of all Airbus Industry new generation aircraft from the A319 to the four engine A340.

The simulator is common to the whole family. Basic crew conversion costs are therefore much lower for airlines, which base their fleets on Airbus technology. Because the crews can be used on different aircraft, operations are more flexible and efficient.

Designing a 192/200 seater based on the A320 was a natural step. The cost effectiveness of the idea is even clearer in market forecast.

The advent of the A319 is perhaps even more inhibitive. Now airlines can adapt a slack operating periods and expand their commercial networks to second cities while keeping the fleet efficient.

The A319 opens up development perspectives for smaller airlines too by providing them now with a high quality aircraft that would go on being attractive.

By founding the first real family of aircraft, Airbus Industry has created a novel concept based on standardization and maximum commonality. We have provided the market with three cost effective aircrafts, which operate efficiently together.

This family works well together.
