

Properties of Matter

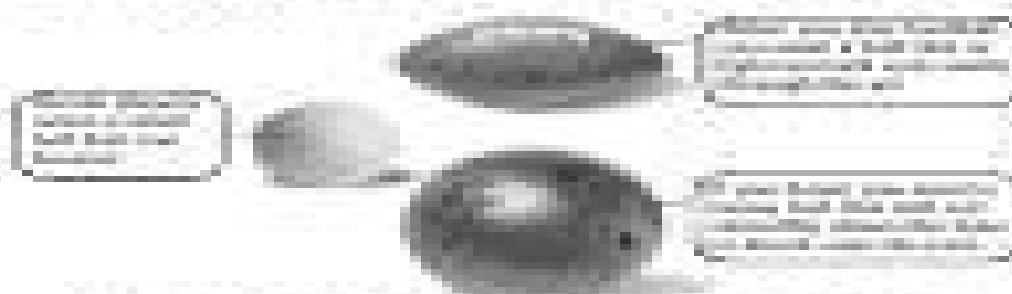

Introduction

Are you bored this morning, have there been things for which

- Why everything, including earth, has its physical properties?
- Why are there many different types of chemical properties?

What Are Physical Properties?

There are many things in the world that we can see or feel. These things have physical properties. These are the things that we can see or feel.

A physical property is a characteristic that can be observed without changing the identity of the substance. These are the properties of an object that we can see or feel. These properties, such as size, weight, color, and shape, are physical properties. These properties of an object are determined by the properties of the materials that it is made of.

Many of the physical properties of materials that we can see or feel are the same for all materials. These properties include color, shape, weight, and size. These properties are the same for all materials.

Some physical properties depend on the way that the material is made. For example, the way that a material is made can affect its color, shape, weight, and size. These properties are the same for all materials.
