

Biology Final for 9th Graders

Use this handout after questions 1-10.

As you learned, the importance of nucleic acids, you must remember the importance of proteins. Protein Name is repeated throughout chapter 10. The more you learn, the more you will understand the importance of proteins. Protein Name is repeated throughout chapter 10. The more you learn, the more you will understand the importance of proteins. A acid has to be ordered correctly of the protein to just the right amino acids. Arrangement is easier for proteins to do their job. Without proper arrangement the proteins don't do their job. This arrangement causes them to move, move, move.

Protein synthesis is the order that tells how the amino acids should be arranged on the proper stage of the protein and its acids. There are two types of nucleic acids DNA (Deoxyribonucleic acid) and RNA (Ribonucleic acid). The building blocks of DNA and RNA are nucleotides. Nucleotides get linked together to make DNA and RNA like the amino acids put together to make proteins.

A nucleotide is made of three parts, a sugar (deoxyribose or ribose), a phosphate group, and a nitrogen base. So the elements that make up the nucleotides are carbon, hydrogen, oxygen, phosphorus, and nitrogen.

In DNA, there are four different types of nitrogen bases. They are called adenine, cytosine, guanine, and thymine. DNA is made up of two strands of nucleotides linked together in a twisted ladder shape called a double helix. The two nitrogen bases held together by complementary bases are opposite each other. Guanine has a shape that complements Cytosine like a puzzle piece. So every nucleotide that has a Guanine base has an adenine base across from it. Cytosine and guanine are also complementary to thymine and they fit together like puzzle pieces.

RNA is a nucleic acid that is a single strand of nucleotides that are in a zig-zag shape. The purpose is for the body to use the energy of the nucleotides that make up the nucleic acid to make the body's protein. DNA's role is for the body to use the energy of the nucleotides of a cell.
