Unit 9 Argumentative Essay

The ruling of Brown v. Board of Education case on May 17, 1954, was a monumental moment in history. This case is one of the most influential cases in U.S. history. The ruling of this case was an enormous victory for members of the civil rights movement, supporters, and activists who were against racism and segregation as a whole. This case was a key player in the ending of the rampant racial segregation in the United States. It had also made the United States become one step closer to the embodiment of its core values of freedom, and equality. The ruling of Plessy v. Ferguson on May 18, 1896, ruled that racial segregation laws did not violate the Constitution, and did not impede on the rights of citizens as long as all of the facilities for each race were of equal quality. However, nothing could be further from the truth. As segregation began to run rampant throughout the United States due to this ruling, many black families who had tried to enroll their children into predominantly all-white schools were declined. One of which was Linda Brown, who was the daughter of Oliver Brown. The Brown Family, along with twelve other local black families who had found themselves in a similar situation, filed class-action lawsuits against the Board of Education Topeka, Kansas. All of the families had echoed the same opinion; that the segregation policy was unconstitutional for
