

Barriers to Trade

The harmonization of national export and import policies has led to a system wherein all the goods of governments have the same international-trade possibilities for the benefit of their own economies. Over the last 50 years, there have been various international trade wars, with significant changes arising from them. Examples of these wars include the General Agreement on Trade and Tariffs, the World Trade Organization (WTO), the European Union (EU), and the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) forum.

However, barriers that come within the economic definition continue to exist. These trade barriers might include the policy of import quotas, for example. In Figure 10, a free-trade line represents the demand-for-the foreign country, the domestic supply curve represents the domestic supply curve, and the domestic demand curve represents the domestic demand curve. The domestic supply curve is a horizontal line, the domestic demand curve is a downward-sloping line, and the domestic price is P_1 . If there were no international-trade possibilities, the price in Figure 10, the equilibrium price, would be P_2 . If there were no international-trade possibilities, the price in Figure 10, the equilibrium price, would be P_3 . If there were no international-trade possibilities, the price in Figure 10, the equilibrium price, would be P_4 .

International Trade

If there is free international-trade, the total supply curve represents the production for domestic and foreign countries, which is the horizontal line P_1 and quantity Q_1 . There are three domestic price levels: P_1 , P_2 , and P_3 . At P_1 , domestic supply is Q_1 and domestic demand is Q_2 . At P_2 , domestic supply is Q_2 and domestic demand is Q_3 . At P_3 , domestic supply is Q_3 and domestic demand is Q_4 . At P_4 , domestic supply is Q_4 and domestic demand is Q_5 . The domestic price is P_1 . The domestic price is P_2 . The domestic price is P_3 . The domestic price is P_4 .
