

How to Construct an Argument Essay:

1. Have students read three articles on a topic (a prompt) to construct an argument essay.
2. Give students a copy of the chart above to write on. Initially you can print a copy for each student then once they become proficient, take the chart away and have them replicate it from memory.
3. The first three boxes at the top is the introduction paragraph, consisting of the HOOK, BACKGROUND, and THESIS.
4. Upon completion of the introduction, students begin the body paragraphs using the acronym TTEDEC. This stands for Transition, Topic sentence, which comes from the thesis. Explain the topic sentence by adding more about what it means. Quote from the articles. Explain the quote and why it's important/ how does it relate to the topic then Close or do a Counter argument.
5. The last step on the chart is the conclusion paragraph. TRP is the acronym. This means Transition, Restate the thesis statement differently, and a Proposed statement that looks at how the issue from the prompt could either impact the community, the world or the future.
6. Students are to review what they have written in the chart then transfer the information into a written essay – part by part.

Note: You must spend a few days explaining the essay process and what each part of the essay is and does.

PSA Argument Essay Prompt:

With the rapid pace of modern technology, especially the internet, personal data is being shared with companies and other agencies. Even in our school systems, often, personal data on students is being shared for “educational purposes.” Read the accompanying texts and decide for yourself whether you think the sharing of data on students is an invasion of privacy, or do you think that it will help teachers and parents better educate students?

Argument Essay Common Core:

The Argument Writing Toolkit Sean Ruday, 2015-07-16 In order for students to write effective arguments they need to read good arguments In this practical book you ll find out how to use mentor texts to make writing instruction more meaningful authentic and successful Author Sean Ruday demonstrates how you can teach middle school students to analyze the qualities of effective arguments and then help them think of those qualities as tools to improve their own writing You ll learn how to Introduce high interest topics to students to get them interested and engaged in argument writing Teach students to look at multiple sides of an issue and critically evaluate evidence to construct informed defensible arguments Make argument writing an interactive student driven exercise in which students pursue their own writing projects Use mentor texts to help students learn the core concepts of argument writing and apply those skills across the curriculum The book is filled with examples and templates you can bring back to the classroom immediately as well as an annotated bibliography which links the concepts in this book to the corresponding Common Core State Standards Blank templates are also available as printable eResources on our website <http://www.routledge.com/9781138924390> Teaching Arguments Jennifer Fletcher, 2015 No matter where students live after graduation one of the most essential tools we can teach them is how to comprehend analyze and respond to arguments Students need to know how writers and speakers choices are shaped by elements of the rhetorical situation including audience occasion and purpose In Teaching Arguments Rhetorical Comprehension Critique and Response Jennifer Fletcher provides teachers with engaging classroom activities writing prompts graphic organizers and student samples to help students at all levels read write listen speak and think rhetorically Fletcher believes that with appropriate scaffolding and encouragement all students can learn a rhetorical approach to argument and gain access to rigorous academic content Teaching Arguments opens the door and helps them pay closer attention to the acts of meaning around them to notice persuasive strategies that might not be apparent at first glance When we analyze and develop arguments we have to consider more than just the printed words on the page We have to evaluate multiple perspectives the tension between belief and doubt the interplay of reason character and emotion the dynamics of occasion audience and purpose and how our own identities shape what we read and write Rhetoric teaches us how to do these things Teaching Arguments will help students learn to move beyond a superficial response to texts so they can analyze and craft sophisticated persuasive arguments a major cornerstone for being not just college and career ready but ready for the challenges of the world How Students Write: A Linguistic Analysis Laura Louise Aull, 2020-04-01 Broad generalizations about people today are a familiar feature of first year student writing How Students Write brings a fresh perspective to this perennial observation using corpus linguistics techniques This study analyzes sentence level patterns in student writing to develop an understanding of how students present evidence draw connections between ideas relate to their readers and ultimately learn to construct knowledge in their writing Drawing on both first year and upper level student writing the book examines the discourse of students at different points in their education It also distinguishes between argumentative and analytic essays to explore the way school genres and assignments shape students choices In focusing on sentence level features such as hedges perhaps and boosters definitely this study shows how such rhetorical choices work together to open or close opportunities for thoughtful exchanges of ideas Attention to these features can help instructors foster civil discourse design effective assignments and expose and question norms of higher education A New Writing Classroom Patrick Sullivan,2014-11-15 In A New Writing Classroom Patrick Sullivan provides a new generation of teachers a means and a rationale to reconceive their approach to teaching writing calling into question the discipline s dependence on argument Including secondary writing teachers within his purview Sullivan advocates a more diverse exploratory and flexible approach to writing activities in grades six through thirteen A New Writing Classroom encourages teachers to pay more attention to research in learning theory transfer of learning international models for nurturing excellence in the classroom and recent work in listening to teach students the sort of dialogic stance that leads to higher order thinking and more sophisticated communication The conventional argumentative essay is often a simplistic form of argument widely believed to be the most appropriate type of writing in English classes but other kinds of writing may be more valuable to students and offer more important kinds of cognitive challenges Focusing on listening and dispositions or habits of mind as central elements of this new composition pedagogy A New Writing Classroom draws not just on composition studies but also on cognitive psychology philosophy learning theory literature and history making an exciting and significant contribution to the field A Practical Study of Argument Trudy Govier,1997 This text provides students with a practical understanding of argument by means of enriched examples while maintaining philosophical soundness The Fourth Edition of this widely acclaimed text continues to provide an integration of formal and informal logic and fallacies and arguments in a clearly presented and theoretically sensible fashion Argumentation and Advocacy ,1998 Writing Arguments John D. Ramage,John C.
