What's Within a Thesis Statement? Exploring Features of Argumentative Thesis Statements Daniel Chang, 2021 Developing strong academic writing skills often requires years of experience and training within a discipline When novice writers are asked to write an argumentative essay they are usually required to draft a thesis statement presenting their position on an issue In argumentative writing a thesis statement addresses the writer's main argument and is the foundation of the entire essay Features of thesis statements are often defined with respect to their location and length within the essay e.g. Petric 2005 or functions As a result further research exploring characteristics of argumentative thesis statements could expand understanding about the distinctive features that operationalize the quality of thesis statements Results of such research would have strong practical implications for instructors regarding what to teach about writing thesis statements In the present study four major features of thesis statements were identified context positionality reasoning and specificity Two raters were asked to assess the presence of each feature for the 78 thesis statements extracted from the argumentative essay outlines of an education course A set of multiple regression analyses were conducted to investigate whether each feature and a composite of the four contributes to the quality of the introduction and the argumentative essay outline Key findings indicated that the context feature and the positionality feature are of importance in predicting the quality of introduction and the essay outline Based on the findings a revised version of Ken Hyland s model of argumentation is proposed and several important implications for teaching writing are recommended

A Linguistic Analysis of Strategies of Argumentation in English Print Ads Julia Trede,2012-05-21 Seminar paper from the year 2012 in the subject English Language and Literature Studies Linguistics grade 1 3 University of Kassel language English abstract No matter where we are advertisements are everywhere but how do people decide which product to buy Today consumers may choose which toothpaste or shampoo they want to purchase because there is a huge range of brands that offer the same goods therefore companies have to persuade consumers to buy their product As a student of linguistics I asked myself how argumentative persuasion in advertising functions and how it contributes to its effectiveness I found two very interesting approaches by Clemens Ottmers and Nina Janich who determined different argumentation strategies for analysing advertisements Although there is a lot of literature dealing with language and advertising there are only few works concerned with strategies of argumentation in advertising Since 1945 and especially during the economic miracle there has been a steady increase of research in the field of language and advertising First works dealing with argumentation and advertising were published in the 1960s In the course of years linguists concentrated more on specific linguistic aspects of advertising and presented first analysing methods Furthermore they focused on rhetoric figures strategies of advertising and on the effects of images Nowadays linguistic research concentrates on semiotics and image text relations as well as on intentions persuasion in advertisements and TV spots However the main problem of linguistic research of advertising is the lack of a fundamental work dealing with language of advertising and its versatility with reference to images and advertising media
