Sustainable Intensification of Agriculture Jules Pretty, Zareen Pervez Bharucha, 2018-06-14 Sustainable intensification SI has emerged in recent years as a powerful new conceptualisation of agricultural sustainability and has been widely adopted in policy circles and debates It is defined as a process or system where yields are increased without adverse environmental impact and without the cultivation of more land. Co-written by Jules Pretty, one of the pioneers of the concept and internationally known and respected authority on sustainable agriculture, this book sets out current thinking and debates around sustainable agriculture and intensification. It recognises that world population is increasing rapidly so that yields must increase on finite land and other resources to maintain food security. It provides the first widely accessible overview of the concept of SI as an innovative approach to agriculture and as a key element in the transition to a green economy. It presents evidence from around the world to show how various innovations are improving yields, resilience and farm incomes, particularly for resource-constrained smallholders in developing countries but also in the developed world. It shows how SI is a fundamental departure from previous models of agricultural intensification. It also highlights the particular role and potential of small-scale farmers and the fundamental importance of social and human capital in designing and spreading effective innovations.

Global Assessment Report on Disaster Risk Reduction 2015 United Nations. International Strategy for Disaster Reduction. Secretariat, 2015. 2015 is a critical year for the future of sustainable development. The 2015 Global Assessment Report on Disaster Risk Reduction highlights the connections between disaster risk and development and shows that decades of experience in managing disasters and reducing climate and disaster risk have produced a wealth of knowledge and good practice which can be applied to achieve sustainable development. The reduction of poverty, the improvement of health and education for all, the achievement of sustainable and equitable economic growth and the protection of the health of the planet now depend on the management of disaster risks in the day-to-day decisions of governments, companies, investors, civil society organizations, households and individuals. Strengthened disaster risk reduction is essential to making development sustainable.

Vulnerability of farmer's livelihood to climate variability induced hazards in Siraro District, West Arsi Zone, Oromia, Regional State, Ethiopia Jarso Wakeyo Utala, 2019-05-08. Master's Thesis from the year 2016 in the subject Agrarian Studies, grade Very Good, course Population and Socioeconomic Development Planning, language English, abstract. Most previous studies on vulnerability of smallholder farmer's livelihood to climatic hazards had focused on large-scale, global, regional or national levels. In addition, they gave more focus to assessment of impacts of climatic hazards to farmers than assessment of farmer's vulnerability to climatic hazards. Thus, this study was designed to bridge this gap by assessing vulnerability of farmer's livelihood at household level, measured as perceived sensitivity and lack of adaptive capacity to climatic hazards, and by exploring sets of socioeconomic indicators that significantly determine vulnerability of farmers' livelihoods. Cross-sectional data was collected through household survey from 379 randomly selected respondents which were also complemented with qualitative assessments. Principal component analysis was used to identify major socioeconomic indicators that contribute to vulnerability of farmer s livelihood using orthogonal axis rotation in SPSS version 20 Binary logit model was used to identify principal socioeconomic indicators that significantly influence sensitivity and adaptive capacity of livelihoods of sampled farmers The findings revealed that households that are heterogeneous in location of residence sources of income ownership to animals have significant influence on perceived sensitivity of farmers to climatic hazards However socioeconomic indicators such as age gender family size have insignificant influence on sensitivity of farmer s livelihood to climatic hazards Gender marital status educational status of household head coping mechanisms like grain cash saving NRM practices has significant influence on perceived adaptive capacity of farmers Yet access to social interconnectedness such as idir or iqub family relatives and cost of drinking water has insignificant influence on perceived adaptive capacity of farmers Currently 59% 38% and 3% of sampled farmers have overall vulnerability status of low moderate and high respectively The overall conclusion is that differences in status of vulnerability of their livelihoods are attributed to differences in their present socioeconomic attributes Community should strengthen existing hazard coping mechanisms whilst GOs and NGOs should support farmers in diversification of income sources and restocking of animals Active community engagement in planning and execution of disaster risk reduction strategies and practices is also indispensable
