Design and Science R. Roger Remington, Robert S. P. Fripp, 2007 It has been said that Will Burtin (1908-1972) was to graphic design what Albert Einstein was to physics. Burtin pioneered important contributions to international typography and visual design. He is best known as the world leader in using design to interpret science as a proponent of clean, uncluttered sans-serif typography and for his large-scale three-dimensional models which carried the craft and the art of display to new heights. His walk-through models included a human blood cell (1958) and brain functions (1960). His major achievement was his clarity and ingenuity with models and graphics, making complex information easy to assimilate. Early success in his native Germany brought Burtin unwelcome attention from Nazi leaders, courting his services. He fled with his Jewish wife to the United States. Within months, he won the prestigious contract to create the Federal Works Agency exhibit for the 1939 New York World's Fair. The wartime Office of Strategic Services drafted Burtin to create Air Force gunnery manuals, cutting recruits' training from six months to six weeks. In 1945, with the U.S. still at war, Fortune magazine lobbied to extract Burtin from the army in order to appoint him Art Director. By the late 1950s, he was designing the walk-through exhibits for which he is renowned. The first monograph on Burtin, Design and Science, illustrates his leadership in five fields using graphics to visualize science and information. Pre-war corporate identity from the mid-1940s, multimedia (which he called 'Integration' from 1948), large-scale scientific visualization in 3-D (from 1958), foreshadowing computer-assisted virtual environments (i.e. CAVE space), and with others promoting Helvetica in North America. Illustrations of Burtin's work that
