Argumentative Research Paper On Divorce:

Women, Work, and Divorce Richard R. Peterson, 1989-01-01 This book considers how women cope with the economic hardship which accompanies divorce using national longitudinal data on a generation of women in the United States These women came of age at a time when they were expected to give priority to family roles over work roles Yet by the time many of them were divorced in the 1970s with the climate of changing perceptions of gender roles women were expected to work and were unprepared for the economic disruption caused by divorce Peterson analyzes the experiences of women drawing upon sociological and economic approaches to the study of labor market outcomes and of life cycle events He shows how over the long term most divorced women can make at least a partial recovery but divorced women with children have a more difficult time making work adjustments and experience greater economic deprivation Given the continuing high rates of divorce Peterson's findings highlight the importance of work rather than marriage for women's economic security

Looking for an Argument Richard Louis Levin, 2003 This book collects a number of Richard Levin's essays beginning with his well known PMLA article of 1988 on Feminist Thematics and Shakespearean Tragedy and continuing through the 1990s that examine and evaluate some of the most important aspects of the new critical approaches to the interpretations of the works of Shakespeare and his contemporaries principally the New Historicism feminism and revisionist versions of Marxism and Freudianism In these essays he is looking not only for rational arguments in these approaches but also for a rational argument with their practitioners and therefore he reprints several of the responses that these essays have elicited including the PMLA Forum letter signed by twenty four people who objected to Feminist Thematics along with his answers to them which contribute to this critique of the present state of the discourse in this field
