Getting Information

"Hi! My name is Natalia and this is my best friend, Steven. We're reporting to you live from Studies Weekly Channel 3-TV. This is your place for the best third grade news and coverage of social studies! We're excited to tell you what we'll be reporting about this year. Are you ready to find out what social studies topics we'll explore on Channel 3-TV?"

"Hey, everyone. I'm Steven. Later, I'll be working with you to discover how to use technology to gather information. Computers are my favorite tech tools! But first, Natalia is going to tell us what we're going to learn about in social studies this year. Natalia?"

"Well, first on our list is geography.

Geography is the study of people, places and the Earth. Geography includes using map skills to find out where people and places are located. Second, we'll learn about history. History is a record of things that happened in the past. The next social studies term is civics. Civics is all about being a good citizen and member of a community. Next on our list is government. Government is an organization that makes laws and keeps order. Our last term is economics. I like this one because it has to do with money! Economics is the way people make, sell and buy things and how they take care of their money."

"Natalia definitely got my attention talking about money! But before I get off the subject, I can't forget to tell you about primary and secondary sources. A good news reporter knows that a primary source of information comes from someone who was at an event. A teacher or grandparent who saw Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. give his famous "I Have a Dream" speech in Washington, D.C., would be a primary source. Can you guess what a secondary source is? Right! A secondary source is information from someone who was not at the event. Sometimes news reporters use these sources in historical stories. An example of a secondary source would be when your parents or teachers tell you what they know about the Civil War, even though they weren't around back then. The Civil War took place a long, long time ago!"

"Can computers help us learn about social studies? You bet! Computers and the Internet are very powerful tools for both reporters and students. We can visit anywhere in the world on virtual field trips, find an expert on any topic and have millions of facts right at our fingertips. Let's get started!"

Using Technology – A Special Report by Studies Weekly TV-3 News Reporter Steven

"Have you ever wanted to visit a city or country that's far away? Well, technology is making it easier to meet different people and look around at distant places! Looking for information on the Internet can be exciting, but just like when you're out in public places, you have to be careful. School computers are usually very safe because of firewalls. Firewalls block dangerous websites that are off limits to students. If you use the Internet at home, always ask an adult to help you."

"One of the websites we'll be using this year is: <https://www.kids.usa.gov/>. Ask your teacher or parent if you can visit this website soon. When you get there, click on GRADES K-5 and then on SOCIAL STUDIES. Find and click "Countries and Culture." Scroll down and find "World Factbook." Take a look at some of the super cool flags and read the names of the countries. You may find some countries you've never even heard of. It's a big world out there!"

Florida Next Generation Sunshine State Standards: SS.3.A.1.1: The student will identify and analyze primary and secondary sources. SS.3.A.1.2: The student will utilize technology to gather information. SS.3.A.2.1: The student will define terms related to social sciences (history, geography, civics, government and economics). SS.3.A.2.2: Explain the purpose and need for government. SS.3.A.3.1: Use thematic maps, tables, charts, graphs, and globes to analyze geographic information. SS.3.A.4.1: Review basic map elements (coordinate grid, cardinal and intermediate directions, title, compass rose, scale, key/legend with symbols).
