1992-2014 Laurence BINET, 2020-11-01 Discipline Problems Tadashi Dozono, 2024-05-07

Angel, a Black tenth grader at a New York City public school, self-identifies as a nerd and likes to learn. But she's troubled that her history classes leave out events like the genocide and dispossession of Indigenous people in the Americas, presenting a sugar-coated image of the United States that is at odds with her everyday experience. The history I learned in school is simpler, she says. The world I live in is a lot more complex. Angel, like every student interviewed in Discipline Problems, has been identified by teachers as a troublemaker, a student whose behavior disrupts classroom norms and interferes with instruction. But her critiques of the curriculum she's taught speak to her curiosity and insight, crucial foundations for understanding history. Like many students who have been marginalized by systemic racism in American schools, she exposes the shortcomings of her classrooms' academic environments by challenging both the content and the methods of her education. All too often, these challenges are framed as troublemaking, and the students are disciplined for acting out instead of being rewarded for their intellectual engagement. Tadashi Dozono, a professor of education and former high school social studies teacher, takes seriously the often-overlooked critiques that students of color who get labeled as troublemakers direct toward their high school history curriculum. He reinterprets troublemaking, usually cast as a behavioral deficit, as an intellectual asset and form of reasoning that challenges the disciplining reason of classrooms where whiteness is valued over the histories and knowledge of people of color. Dozono shows how what are traditionally framed as discipline problems can be seen through a different lens as responses to educational practices that marginalize non-white students. Discipline Problems reveals how students of color seek out alternate avenues for understanding their world and imagines a pedagogy that champions the curiosity, intellect, and knowledge of marginalized learners.

The new sustainable development agenda is expected to touch every country person and activity. Therefore, shouldnt every dollar count toward achieving it. Asia and the Pacific home to more than half of humanity has the money to improve the lives of all its people and protect the planet in fair and durable ways. However, funds are in many hands invested elsewhere or used for various purposes. It is time to move beyond this fragmentation and align finance behind sustainable development.

recognizing that while capital will be key so will the capacity to apply and attract it effectively. This report explores some of the ways forward. It highlights not just the need to inject more money into investments that contribute to sustainable development but also the need to attract funds toward them to finance human needs infrastructure and cross border public goods. The report spans public and private options in their distinct roles and in combination. An eight point agenda suggests how key constituents can do their parts.
