

Arnold Palmer Hospitals' Supply Chain Final Case

1. How does this supply chain differ from that in a manufacturing firm?

Manufacturing firms when require raw materials or services to produce a finished product, they turn to sales people, catalogues, internet and in smart companies they rely on their skilled supply chain managers to research, negotiate and secure the best possible contracts for the materials and services needed for their operations.

These activities cover procurement of materials and services from suppliers transforming them into intermediate goods, final products and delivering those products through a distribution system.

Manufacturing firms focus on development of new product innovations and efficiency.

Arnold Palmer Hospital, focuses on supply chain management using a "Low Cost Strategy" which works best.

Their involvement in a regional purchasing alliance, and the formation of a Medical Economic Outcomes Committee (MEOC), has allowed them to find efficiencies in their supply chain, while maintaining commitment to quality and saving millions of dollars.

The results of the formation of a purchasing alliance Arnold Palmer Hospital finds cost savings through:

- Standardization
- blanket purchase orders,
- long-term contracts,
- more control of product development,
- overhead reductions,
- monitoring inefficiency that can retained malpractices and utilization of products integration of suppliers at different tiers,
