How to Talk About SPaG

Home-School Communication

"Spelling, punctuation, and grammar - often called SPaG in schools - are crucial building blocks for children learning to speak, write, and listen. Having a good knowledge of grammar allows your child to communicate their ideas and feelings, and helps them choose the right language for any situation."

Source: Home Education

In 2013, the government introduced a statutory test for primary schools in which children would be assessed on their spelling, punctuation and grammar abilities. This aimed to ensure that all children were leaving primary school with a group of essential English skills. Spelling now plays a part in both the year 2 and year 6 tests and is a key focus of the new, updated national curriculum.

Spelling, punctuation, and grammar are crucial building blocks for children learning to speak, write, and listen. Good grammar knowledge allows your child to communicate their ideas and feelings, and helps them choose the correct language for any situation. What looks at the way the English language works, from the way that sentences are put together to looking at the spelling of words in the context of the sentence. The SPaG test now includes correctly spelling new vocabulary, identifying and writing correctly punctuated sentences, identifying and writing grammatically correct sentences and using words in the correct manner. Without these key skills, children will struggle to progress in their careers, as these are a requirement of any profession.

In 2013, the government introduced statutory spelling, grammar and punctuation tests as part of English primary schools.

In 2013, the new tests of English set the national standard in reading, writing and maths, introduced in the summer of 2012. These now include spelling and punctuation, introduced from 2013.

Typically, the full marks for spelling, punctuation and grammar (SPaG) in Year 6 is 20 to 40 marks out of 100, over both papers.
