

Tips for Scholarship Essays

International Academic Programs
University of Wisconsin - Madison

Many scholarship applications now require an essay of some sort. This is for a number of reasons, most importantly, the selection committee wants to get to know the applicant. It's far easier for them to award you the scholarship if they feel like they know you. Selection committees also want to make sure that you can competently express your ideas in writing. Even if you're at the top of your class and volunteer in every organization in town, you won't get the top prize if you can't put your thoughts on paper.

Writing scholarship essays for study abroad doesn't have to be much different than writing other scholarship essays. You'll want to follow the same steps and stick to the same goals, but your focus may be a bit different. These pages contain suggestions to help you get started but the best. Be sure to refer to other resources in your quest for the winning essay.

Read Directions. The type of essay can vary widely, from a personal statement to a project proposal, but selection committees are looking for some of the same things. Be sure to read the essay directions carefully, as some committees might outline in detail what they are looking for in the essay. Additionally, if the directions need clarification, contact the administrator directly.

Be Unique. Many students will have similar backgrounds as you which means sticking out in a crowd is paramount, and the essay requirement is the perfect opportunity to do so. It's your chance to show the scholarship selection committee how great you really are, tell them a unique story of personal perseverance, or describe your limitless potential and unmatched determination.

Tell Your Story. Everyone has a story to tell. Your essay can take many forms, from a personal narrative of your past accomplishments to a careful analysis of a quote, favorite author, public policy or important global trend. Whichever form you choose (or the directions require) your goal is to show that you are more thoughtful, creative and dedicated than anyone else. As long as your story answers the essay question the sky's the limit.

Be Memorable. You can do this in two great ways; by being original and by being descriptive. Not only will this perk interest in your story, but it will help make your essay memorable. If you have a unique personal background, tell that. But remember, just because you have a special story or diverse family history doesn't mean you're scholarship worthy. When writing your story be as descriptive and detailed as you can. Don't just tell the selection committee that you are interested in alleviating poverty; tell them that you're so dedicated you've started a fund drive for a local charity.

Show Initiative. The best way to do this is to contact the scholarship funder or administrator directly. Find out the goals and purpose of the sponsor organization. This will help you keep your essay on topic and relevant. Then, figure out a way to relate your interests to the organization's goals. Many times these are the most creative essays. Maybe your desire to be an international aid worker includes upgrading access to technology in rural areas. Perhaps your proposed career in international business will put you in close contact with environmental issues in urban areas. You can always find a way to relate your interests to the essay's topic.

Be Yourself. Finally, be sure your essay accurately depicts who you are and what you care about. Don't write what you think the selection committee wants to hear.

Kimmel,2005-03-23 This volume brings a variety of perspectives to bear on the issue of how higher education institutions can or should choose students during the early part of the 21st century Many of the contributors report on research to develop and validate potential tools to assist those responsible for admission decisions Other contributors however pose broader questions about the nature of selective admissions about institutional responses to the changing demography of those seeking to enter higher education or about the appropriate criteria of success in higher education The volume is particularly timely because the question of how changes in admission tools and processes will affect campus diversity following the recent Supreme Court decision concerning the University of Michigan Diversity is an important concern of all of the contributors and the chapter by Lee Bollinger President at Michigan at the time the court cases were filed is particularly relevant This book brings together the research that underlies a variety of proposed approaches to improving the selection of students Providing support for the integrity of the admissions process and the validity of new tools to help a higher education institution to select a diverse student body this book explores the implications of the assessment component of K 12 school reform for higher education admissions practices The diverse contributions to this volume reflect the current ferment in educational research and educational practice as institutions of higher education seek to develop a new admissions paradigm for coming decades following the University of Michigan decisions This book is intended for those leaders and professionals who set admission policies and practices in American colleges and graduate and professional schools as well as for those scholars and scientists who research develop and validate tools for use in the process of choosing students in ways that are congruent with an institution s mission values and goals
