

N5A (Neutral Selection Assisted) Transmission Information

- The N5A system assists the operator by preventing the unwanted engagement of 2nd gear when trying to locate neutral with the gear selector. This system also prevents shifting into 2nd gear from a stop when the vehicle is not moving forward.

- When the transmission is in first gear or second, and starting or stopping occurs, the ball bearings are moved away from the mainshaft, preventing the gear from sliding on the mainshaft. As the transmission speed increases in first gear, centrifugal force pulls the three ball bearings into position in the 1st gear, thus allowing the shift fork to select the 1st gear to allow engagement into 1st gear.

N5A (Neutral Selection Assisted) Transmission Component Removal

- Remove mainshaft as outlined in this chapter and secure vertically.
- Remove 4th, 3rd & 2nd gear along with all applicable bearing rings, thrust washers and needle bearings from the mainshaft.

- All three ball bearings need to be seated outward in the 4th gear pockets for the 4th gear to slide up and off of the mainshaft. When the ball bearings are properly seated in the 4th gear for removal, they are visible through the hole in the gear. This can be accomplished by use of the following:
 - 1. Lift the 4th gear upward with a shift fork approx. 3/8" & spin the mainshaft assembly so centrifugal force pulls all three of the ball bearings outward into the 4th gear pockets, then lift the gear upward off of the mainshaft.
 - 2. Securely fit the main shaft at each 4th gear bearing pocket location until all three bearings are seated into the 4th gear pockets. Squaring victory engine oil into the 4th gear pocket holes will aid getting the ball bearings to stay in the outward position.

CAUTION

Only use Victory engine oil to lubricate transmission components. Using grease or other lubricants may cause incorrect operation of the N5A system.

10

N5A (Neutral Selection Assisted) Transmission Component Installation

- To install 4th gear onto the mainshaft, lubricate the inside 4th gear pockets and spin with Victory engine oil. Insert the three ball bearings into the 4th 4th gear bearing pockets.

- With the mainshaft secured vertically, rotate 4th gear so any one of the three bearing holes in the gear and the bearing pocket on the shaft are in alignment. Note the alignment notch on one spline of the mainshaft. Be sure the ball bearings do not fall out of the 4th gear pockets when positioning the gear onto the splines.

- Slide 4th gear down onto the splines making sure that the pocket alignment is correct. If the ball bearings and mainshaft pockets do not line up, incorrect operation of the N5A system will result.

- When 4th gear is fully installed, slowly rock the mainshaft so the bearings move into the mainshaft pockets or use a shift fork to push the ball bearings into the mainshaft pockets. Check for proper N5A operation by trying to remove the 4th gear from the main shaft, the gear should not pull up and off of the mainshaft without performing steps 1 & 4 of the removal process.

- If N5A operation is correct, reassemble mainshaft as outlined in this chapter.

CAUTION

Only use Victory engine oil to lubricate transmission components. Using grease or other lubricants may cause incorrect operation of the N5A system.
