5th Grade Unit 1
Exploration and Colonization

Date: _____

Time Allotted: _____

Desired Results: (Unit Understanding)	Assessment:	Student Friendly TEKS:	Topics/Concepts:
The English colonists brought democratic ideas and institutions with them to the new world. Unit Questions: Was self-government an original idea that developed in the Colonies?	RAFT writing assignment	S.15A compare the systems of government of early European colonists; S.15B identify examples of representative government in the colonies, including the Mayflower Compact	History and Government <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Colonial Institutions• Historic Documents• Self-Government
Anticipatory Set: (Universal Generalization) (Hook): When creating something new, people tend to follow familiar examples. Have pairs discuss the following scenario: Pretend that you and the rest of the members of this class are abandoned on an island in the middle of the ocean. No teacher or other adults are present. You have some food and water and there are materials to build shelter. "What do you think would be the best ways for the group decide how to deal with the following difficult problems?" (Not what they should decide, but how) <ul style="list-style-type: none">• Deciding how to distribute the limited amount of food• Deciding who will build the shelters• Deciding who will grow more food• Deciding how to keep the people safe from members of the class who might be bullies• Deciding who should lead a party to seek rescue for the group• Decide what rules the group will follow and how to enforce them	Have some of the pairs share their responses and make a list on a transparency. They may include things like: <ul style="list-style-type: none">• The whole group voting to decide how to deal with each problem• The group voting to elect a leader to make and enforce the decisions• Making sure people get an equal say when decisions are made• Having a judges or a jury settle disputes regarding the problems	vocabulary: democracy, institution, self government, representative government, Mayflower Compact, House of Burgesses
Have the pairs discuss this question: "Why do you think most of you suggested similar ways to make decisions on the islands. Have the pairs share their responses and discuss as a class?" Try to reach consensus that most people suggested voting, equality, leaders, rules, judges, etc., because those are the ways we solve problems in our society. End the hook by sharing that the English colonists also formed their governments in the New World based on ideas they brought with them from England. These ideas and the governments they created from them helped for all the ideas about government we still use today.	Instructional Input: (Line) Modeled/Guided Practice Have students work in table groups. Create a transparency of the graphic organizer and have them create it in their notebooks. Distribute several sheets of self-government icons and provide scissors and paste. Distribute the enclosed reading sheet to each student. Read from the beginning through the Magna Carta section with students and model your thinking as you decide which of the icons are appropriate to place in the Magna Carta section of the organizer. Answer any questions from students about how to complete the assignment. Allow the tables to complete the reading and paste the icons onto the organizer, writing captions to justify their work.	How will you check for understanding? The teacher will monitor students' conversations and ask guiding questions to check for understanding throughout the lesson.
Independent Practice: (Sinker) Have students assume the role of a colonist who has settled in one of the 13 colonies in the 1600's. Have them write a postcard to a friend in England describing what kind of government they have in their colony. They should describe both how the government operates and the rights their people have. They should discuss similarities between their government and the government in England. On the reverse side of the card, have them create images (perhaps using the icons as models) that show how their government works.	Modifications/Extensions: Students who need modifications may be placed together and work with more guidance from the teacher. The reading selection may be recorded on an audiotape or cd for students who need additional support.
