Algebra of Conscience Vladimir A. Lefebvre, 1982-04-30

In this book two ethical systems are described in the language of mathematics Ordinarily mathematics is thought to be a science of quantity Indeed manipulation of quantities constitutes much of mathematics

Elementary applied mathematics deals with reckoning and measurement where concrete quantities are objects of attention such as counting sheep or weighing corn

But the operations on these quantities are performed with the help of symbols from which concrete referents have been abstracted out

3 5 8 regardless of whether the symbols stand for numbers of sheep or tons of corn. Thus the first principle that exhibits the power of mathematics is abstraction. It is one of the three pillars on which the edifice of mathematics rests. Another pillar is precision. Ordinarily man communicates by words. Words serve communication to the extent that they refer to things, events, states of affairs, feelings of the speaker and so on. These are the meanings attributed to words. Communication is successful to the extent that the meanings coded upon words by the speaker correspond to the meanings decoded by the hearer. As is well known, the degree of this correspondence varies enormously in different contexts of discourse and with the backgrounds or attitudes of the speakers and hearers. Mathematics is a language in which the meanings of the symbols, the words of this language, are absolutely precise. This precision is achieved by abstraction. Abstract terms are defined by their relations to other terms and by nothing else.
