

Objectivity: An Introduction

Students demonstrate an ability to describe an experience after reading historic documents simply from the documents without specifying or putting the experience in a context. The lack of contextualization often is a common mistake as they read the primary documents. Contextualizing sources: The typical contextualized activity helps students to make sense of the past by the questions that provide context such as: historical situation, time period, historical setting, or background. The student is required to make sense of the past and to contextualize it. A strong history teacher is a teacher who is able to make sense of the past and to contextualize it.
