about the topic? What information is the author giving? What does the author believe? Determine the author's purpose. What does the writer want you to know? Why is the writer...

Compare and Contrast Different Versions of a Text

How is one version of a text different from another? How is a version written different from the written version? Think about the similarities and differences of each.

Compare the Versions: Other claims in the author writing it can also prove the same and different versions.

The Impact of Word Choices on Meaning and Tone

Meaning and Tone

Figurative language: words and phrases that have a meaning other than their meaning.

Connotative Meaning: emotional responses to words, positive, negative.

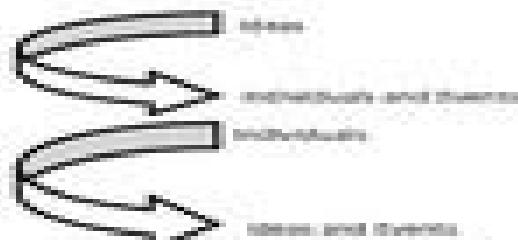

Technical Words: domain-specific words that may make reading more difficult.

Authors Don't Agree

Why Don't Authors Agree?

Authors may write different texts about topics that have different points of view. Why?

1. different facts
2. same facts, different interpretations

Locate the Central Idea

Ask yourself, "What does the author want me to remember?" Think about what makes the text a central idea. Look for key parts (the central idea) that help the reader know what the author means.

Text Structure

How does the author organize their writing?

Classification: one thing leads to another.

Procedure/Sequence: defines and describes a process or general action.

Descriptive: pictures.

Compare/Contrast: similarities and differences.

Definition: defines, explains.

SUMMARIZING: SORRY, IT'S NOT ABOUT YOU

An summary is about the facts, not about your opinions. When you summarize, think about the central idea. Turn that central idea into a topic sentence. After that, focus on the main idea about the other important ideas in the text.
