Title: The effect of the _____ on the _____ Independent variable Dependent variable

I. Question:

The question must be directly related to what is being found out in the experiment. It must be testable and observable. No personal pronouns (I, you, we, them, he, she, it, etc.). Don't forget the question mark at the end!!!

II. Background Information:

*Format of Background Information

- You must answer questions in paragraph form.
- It must include at least 3 cited sources (in text citations).
- It must have at least 7 sentences.

What should be included in Background Information

1. A basic introduction to the experiment. A topic sentence.
 - Include the scientific question and the purpose of the experiment.
2. Include observations and prior knowledge about the experiment.
 - Use all 5 senses to describe the main materials used and concepts addressed.
 - Careful, NO 1st or 2nd PERSON PRONOUNS (I, we, you)
3. Write definitions of important words.
4. Concluding/recap sentence. Transition to the hypothesis.

III. Hypothesis:

IV. Experimental Procedures:

A. Procedure: A numbered, step-by-step list of instructions to carry out the experiment. These need to be detailed enough so that if you left the room, another person would be able to repeat it without asking you any questions.

19. Variables

1. Independent Variable—the variable that is purposely changed or manipulated.
2. Dependent Variable—the variable that measures the change (what you are measuring your results).
3. Constants—all the factors that remain the same throughout the experiment.
4. Control—A way to detect any hidden variable that may be changing without you knowing. The part of the experiment that serves as a standard for a comparison. The control may be a "no treatment" group. You can think of this as "normal conditions"—what is not changed.

V. Data, Calculations, and Graphs:

Abandon Timber

The data table must include:

1. A title
2. The independent variable (the purposeful change) in the left column.
3. The dependent variable (the results)
