

Lesson Plans: Living Life Deliberately-Journal Activities
Class: Advisory Class Activities
Instructor: Barbara Fowler
School: Emporia High School

Note: Living Life Deliberately and Henry David Thoreau's "experiment" of living life deliberately is this year's ongoing theme for my high school Advisory Class that meets biweekly during the four years of their high school career. Students will create an interactive journal based on teacher provided prompts designed to meet the state outcomes for social and emotional growth as defined in the post-secondary success goals.

Prompts will be provided once or twice per week and will be designed to correspond with required advisory activities which include: goal setting, class enrollment choices, citizenship, responsibility and more.

Most prompts are designed as beginning class activities that will require between 10-20 minutes of a 30 minutes advisory period. The initial lesson will require the entire class period and will serve as an introduction to the Henry David Thoreau and his "experiment" in living life-deliberately.

Kansas Social Emotional Growth Outcomes:

Students who are ready for post-secondary success must identify and demonstrate well developed social-emotional skills and identified individual and community core principles that assure academic, vocational, and personal success. Students who are ready for post-secondary success in social-emotional and character development reflect these descriptions. These are not standards but instead offer a portrait of students who meet the goals in this document.
