Exploring Creation with Physics

TEXT FOR MODULE 10

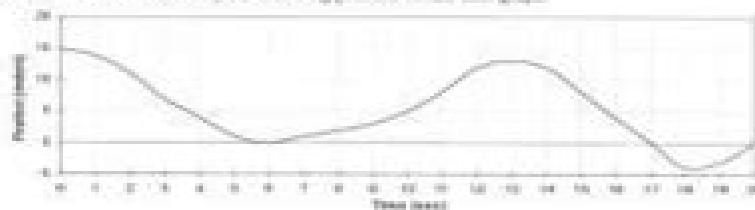

1. The acceleration of a car is zero. Does this mean that its velocity is also zero?
2. If the velocity of a plane is reported as 100 miles and its acceleration is reported as -10 miles^2 , is the plane speeding up or slowing down?
3. What is the difference between speed and velocity?
4. A physicist measures the instantaneous velocity of an object in three different places along its journey. The velocities were 2 miles, 8 miles, and 6 miles. She then determines the object's average velocity throughout the journey. Which of the following values is most likely to be that average velocity? 1 miles, 3 miles, or 16 miles?
5. A person is walking to an airport at a constant velocity of 1.3 miles. What is the person's acceleration?
6. A football player receives a kickoff and runs 90 yards straight into the end zone. After catching the ball and doing his dance, he turns around and runs 20 yards back to his teammates for water (or beer, substituting). How much distance did he travel? What was his final displacement?
7. A car is traveling down a one-lane country road at 20 miles/hour. 100 yards ahead, a truck is traveling the opposite direction at 15 miles/hour. If they are 0.20 miles apart, how long will it be before they run into each other, assuming neither one of them slows down?

8. A car starts at rest and accelerates as quickly as possible. If the acceleration is 1.3 miles^2 and the car accelerates for 10.0 seconds, what will the car's final velocity be?

Questions 9–12 refer to the figure below.

A car's motion is described by the following position versus time graph.
