ORGANIZATION OF LIVING THINGS

SCIENCE STANDARDS: 7.E.1.1, 7.E.1.2, 7.E.1.3

What are the three main levels of organization for living things? Explain how each level is organized and how they are related.

Living things are organized into three main levels. These levels are called levels of organization. These levels are: cell, tissue, and organ. Cells are the basic units of organization. Cells are the smallest living things. Cells are organized into tissues. Tissues are groups of similar cells that work together to perform a specific function.

Tissues are organized into organs. Organs are groups of tissues that work together to perform a specific function. For example, the heart is an organ. It is made of muscle tissue and connective tissue. The heart is organized into four chambers. These chambers work together to pump blood throughout the body.

Organ systems are groups of organs that work together to perform a specific function. For example, the digestive system is made of the stomach, intestines, and liver. These organs work together to digest food and absorb nutrients. The digestive system is an organ system. Organ systems are the largest level of organization. Organ systems work together to perform specific functions.
