WORD RECOGNITION

Complete the following paragraph by writing the correct word(s) in the spaces provided. You have been provided with part of the word to help you in your task.

The chest _____ X-ray _____, as it is more commonly called, is chest film or a ray, is one of the most common methods for evaluating the lungs and other structures in the thorax. Air-filled lung tissue appears mostly dark on the film because it is easily penetrated by X-rays. We describe this effect by saying the tissue is _____ radiolucent _____. The denser lower tissue of ribs appears white. Dense matter that is not easily penetrated is referred to as _____ radiopaque _____. Fat is denser as it appears whiter than air or tissue. A smaller patient's breast tissue will alter the appearance of film. Obesity has the same effect. Soft tissues such as blood vessels appear more grayish because they have an intermediate density.

Abnormal conditions may be spotted through observation of certain densities in the wrong location. Accumulation of fluid in the pleural space, or _____ pleural effusion _____, appears white and may obscure the angle where the ribs meet the diaphragm. If you collect air in the pleura, we call it _____ pneumothorax _____. Airways appear white when filled with gas or fluid. On the chest film dense white areas are called pulmonary _____ consolidation _____. If airways are filled with fluid but the airways around them are open, you will see air _____ bronchograms _____ that may indicate pneumonia. Air in the pleural space, or a _____ pneumothorax _____, is another example of an abnormal density. This condition appears as a black area with some of the usual grayish markings of blood vessels in the lung tissue.

COMPREHENSION

1. Describe the four tissue densities you can see on a chest radiograph.

- air: radiolucent, or lucent and appears very dark gray appearing virtually black
- fat: radiol or lucent and appears light gray
- tissue: radi or opaque and appears medium gray
- bone: radi or opaque and appears white
