Abstract: Refugees' mental health and well-being are affected by the conditions of their flight and by the conditions of their reception in the host country. This study examines the mental health and well-being of refugees in the host country, with a focus on the impact of the conditions of their flight and reception. The study is based on a sample of 100 refugees in the host country, who were interviewed about their experiences and mental health. The results show that the conditions of flight and reception have a significant impact on the mental health and well-being of refugees. The study also identifies the need for mental health services for refugees in the host country.
