Christianity art is usually produced in most cases to supplement, portray and illustrate in a more tangible manner principles behind Christianity. Nearly all Christian groupings either use or have used before art in some aspect. The style, prominence and representations have been found to be changing with time but most of the representations have mainly been those of Jesus ministry as well as in some few cases, the Old Testament. In Roman Catholicism, Anglicanism and eastern orthodoxy, saints are also depicted in art images. The first Christian image to be preserved dates back in 70 AD.

Earliest examples of Christian art are found in the catacombs. It is from the funerary art found in the catacombs that much of the revelation as to who the early Christians were is revealed. Early Christians used to employ artists to decorate tombs in an attempt to communicate some messages. They were seeking to even take the light of the gospel in to what might be perceived as a dark and cold chamber where their dead lay awaiting the resurrection day. Catacomb images have been noted for their clarity of purpose. The understanding of the pagan art is imperative when making an attempt to interpret the meaning of the Christian images.

Paleochristian art adhered to most of the classical rules of expression that governed figurative arts. Thus the understanding of the pagans expressed the art helps to unlock the Christian images meaning. (Guru, 1995). Frescoes, inscriptions, sculptures and Graffiti in catacombs As some of these have been lost forever in some cases, they have with time been deteriorating. Sculptures have however stood the test of time since they are carved from the stones. Statues, sarcophagi and inscriptions are some of the sculptures found in the catacombs.

Sarcophagus is an antiquity's marble coffin that ranged in size from those of married couples to infants size. Though some have on their four lateral panels sculptured reliefs, others were limited to either the frontal panel or the three panels. The sculptured images from the pagan sarcophagi usually represented the mythological stories while the Christian ones were used to illustrate the biblical episodes, life of Jesus and in some cases the images of the dead. Most of the statues that are found in the catacombs are mainly those of Jesus representing Him as a good shepherd.

The pagan figure of Orpheus was used as the artistic model that had a lamb on the shoulder and a flute on the side. Though christians never adorned the catacombs with the statues that the Christians had, they did eventually adopt Orpheus as a representation of Good Shepherd, Jesus. Inscriptions on the other hand are often characteristics. They are either engravings of either symbols or signs or they can be text that is written in Latin or Greek (Saoud, 2004). Graffiti which is very common in catacombs dates back in 2000 years ago. Unlike the modern christians who use spray paint, early Christian

The End of Diversity in Art Historical Writing James Elkins, 2020-12-07 The End of Diversity in Art Historical Writing is the most globally informed book on world art history drawing on research in 76 countries. In addition, some chapters have been crowd sourced posted on the internet for comments which have been incorporated into the text. It covers the principal accounts of Eurocentrism, center and margins, circulations and atlases of art, decolonial theory, incommensurate cultures, the origins and dissemination of the October model, problems of access to resources, models of multiple modernisms and the emergence of English as the de facto lingua franca of art writing.

Creative Writing and Art History Catherine Grant, Patricia Rubin, 2012-03-19 Creative Writing and Art History considers the ways in which the writing of art history intersects with creative writing. Essays range from the analysis of historical examples of art historical writing that have a creative element to examinations of contemporary modes of creative writing about art. Considers the ways in which the writing of art history intersects with creative writing. Covers a diverse subject matter from late Neolithic stone circles to the writing of a sentence by Flaubert. The collection both contains essays that survey the topic as well as more specialist articles. Brings together specialist contributors from both sides of the Atlantic.

Video Art Historicized Malin Hedlin Hayden, 2016-03-03 Video art emerged as an art form that from the 1960s and onwards challenged the concept of art hence art historical practices. From the perspective of artists, critics and scholars engaged with this new medium, art was seen as too limiting a notion. Important issues were to rethink art as a means for critical investigations and a demand for visual reconsiderations. Likewise, art history was argued to be in crisis and in need of adapting its theories and methods in order to produce interpretations and thereby establish historical sense for moving images as fine art. Yet as this book argues, video art history has evolved into a discourse clinging to traditional concepts, ideologies and narrative structures manifested in an increasing body of texts. Video Art Historicized provides a novel, insightful and also challenging re-interpretation of this field by examining the discourse and its own premises. It takes a firm conceptual approach to the material, examining the conceptual, theoretical and methodological implications that are simultaneously contested by both artists and authors yet intertwined in both the legitimizing and the historicizing processes of video as art. By engaging art history's most debated concepts, canon, art and history, this study provides an in-depth investigation of the mechanisms of the historiography of video art. Scrutinizing various narratives on video art, the book emphasizes the profound and widespread hesitations towards but also the efforts to negotiate traditional concepts and practices. By focusing on the politics of this discourse, theoretical issues of gender, nationality and particular themes in video art, Malin Hedlin Hayden contests the presumptions that inform video art and its history.

Making Art History Elizabeth Mansfield, 2014-05-01 Making Art History is a collection of essays by contemporary scholars on the practice and theory of art history as it responds to institutions as diverse as art galleries and museums, publishing houses and universities, school boards and professional organizations, political parties and multinational corporations The text is split into four thematic sections each of which begins with a short introduction from the editor the sections include Border Patrols addresses the artistic canon and its relationship to the ongoing war on terror globalization and the rise of the Belgian nationalist party The Subjects of Art History questions whether art and history are really what the discipline seeks to understand Instituting Art History concerns art history and its relation to the university and raises questions about the mission habits ethics and limits of university today Old Master New Institutions shows how art history and the museum respond to nationalism corporate management models and the culture wars

Painting as Western Art History James Elkins,2010-06-01 This is a provocative essay of reflections on traditional mainstream scholarship on Chinese art as done by towering figures in the field such as James Cahill and Wen Fong James Elkins offers an engaging and accessible survey of his personal journey encountering and interpreting Chinese art through Western scholars writings He argues that the search for optimal comparisons is itself a modern Western interest and that art history as a discipline is inherently Western in several identifiable senses Although he concentrates on art history in this book and on Chinese painting in particular these issues bear implications for Sinology in general and for wider questions about humanistic inquiry and historical writing Jennifer Purtle s Foreword provides a useful counterpoint from the perspective of a Chinese art specialist anticipating and responding to other specialists likely reactions to Elkins s hypotheses
