Machine Learning for Factor Investing Guillaume Coqueret, Tony Guida, 2023-08-08 Machine learning ML is progressively reshaping the fields of quantitative finance and algorithmic trading ML tools are increasingly adopted by hedge funds and asset managers notably for alpha signal generation and stocks selection The technicality of the subject can make it hard for non specialists to join the bandwagon as the jargon and coding requirements may seem out of reach Machine learning for factor investing Python version bridges this gap It provides a comprehensive tour of modern ML based investment strategies that rely on firm characteristics The book covers a wide array of subjects which range from economic rationales to rigorous portfolio back testing and encompass both data processing and model interpretability Common supervised learning algorithms such as tree models and neural networks are explained in the context of style investing and the reader can also dig into more complex techniques like autoencoder asset returns Bayesian additive trees and causal models All topics are illustrated with self contained Python code samples and snippets that are applied to a large public dataset that contains over 90 predictors The material is available online so that readers can reproduce and enhance the examples at their convenience If you have even a basic knowledge of quantitative finance this combination of theoretical concepts and practical illustrations will help you learn quickly and deepen your financial and technical expertise

A First Course in Options Pricing Theory

Response Models for Detection of Change Anatol Rapoport,W. Stein,G. Burkheimer,2012-12-06 This book reports our research on detection of change processes that underlie psychophysical learning medical diagnosis military and production control situations and share three major features First the states of the process are not directly observable but become gradually known with the sequential acquisition of fallible information over time Second the mechanism that generates the fallible information is not stationary rather it is subjected to a sudden and irrevocable change Thirdly in complete probabilistic information about the time of change is available when the process commences The purpose of the book is to characterize this class of detection of change processes to derive the optimal policy that minimizes total expected loss and most importantly to develop testable response models based on simple decision rules for describing detection of change behavior The book is theoretical in the sense that it offers mathematical models of multi stage decision behavior and solutions to optimization problems However it is not anti empirical as it aims to stimulate new experimental research and to generate applications Throughout the book questions of experimental verification are briefly considered and existing data from two studies are brought to bear on the validity of the models The work is not complete it only provides a starting point for investigating how people detect a change in an uncertain environment balancing between the cost of delay in detecting the change and the cost of making an incorrect terminal decision
