Document Layout and Organization of a Guide to Latex Jamie Barlow, 2017-02-03

The standard values of class, of which one and only one may be given, are book, report, article, or letter. The properties of the letter class are explained in Chapter 16. The basic differences between these classes lie not only in the page layouts but also in the organization. An article may contain parts, sections, subsections, and so on, while a report can also have chapters. A book also has chapters but treats even and odd pages differently; also, it prints running heads on each page with the chapter and section titles.

User Customizations of a Guide to Latex Rhys Marshall, 2017-02-03. LATEX allows the user to define his or her own commands and environments. However, since these make extensive use of the LATEX counters and lengths, we will first present a more detailed discussion of these objects and how they may be manipulated.

Presentation Material of a Guide to Latex Nathan Clayton, 2017-02-03. So far, we have been assuming that the output of a LATEX project is to be printed paper or an electronic document looking like printed paper displayed on the computer monitor Another important type of output is presentation material the visual support displayed in front of an audience during an oral presentation Traditionally this consisted of a set of slides to be projected onto a screen but in more recent times this has been replaced by viewgraphs or transparencies and an overhead projector giving the speaker much more interactive control over the presentation However the truly modern presentation is done electronically with the entire presentation stored in a computer directly connected to the projector there are no slides to fall out of the cassette or be inserted the wrong way around no viewgraphs to spill out onto the floor The only thing that can go wrong is that the computer refuses the connection needs rebooting or the necessary display program is missing Such teething problems are occurring less frequently now that this form of presentation is becoming standard
